

Manual Review & Decision Cases

Evaluating customer status purely with automated rules can lead to incorrect interventions. Below is a manual audit of 10 specific, non-straightforward customer profiles from our snapshot. Each case details a tailored strategy based on transaction histories, support sentiment, and product engagement.

Case 1: CUST00005 (The Drifting VIP)

- Profile: High-value Gold Loyalty Tier.
- The Conflict: Extreme recency gap (no orders in 282 days), but they had a highly negative support interaction (sentiment_score = -1.0, resolution_hours = 37.7h) during their last transaction. Interestingly, their 30-day web metrics show high engagement: 18 sessions, 95 product views, and some cart additions.
- Strategic Verdict: High-Priority Winback. The customer is actively browsing our site but is hesitant to purchase due to their past terrible experience.
- Action: Direct support outreach. A personal CRM email referencing their previous shipping dispute, offering a genuine apology, along with a free premium gift directly added to their active cart.

Case 2: CUST00012 (The High-Value Returner)

- Profile: Silver Tier customer with 3 orders in the last 180 days (Monetary: ₹1,540).
- The Conflict: They have a 50% product return rate. Their support tickets indicate frustration over sizing/product mismatch, but they continue to browse our collection weekly.
- Strategic Verdict: Product Curation Assistance. They like our brand but struggle with product fit, costing us margin in returns.
- Action: Avoid sending direct discount codes. Instead, send an invite to a complimentary virtual skin/routine consultation to match them with products less likely to be returned.

Case 3: CUST00021 (The Promo-Opportunist)

- Profile: High transaction frequency (5 orders in 180 days, total spend ₹2,800).
- The Conflict: Their average discount percentage is 48%. They have never bought an item at full price. Their web visits only spike during markdown events.
- Strategic Verdict: Low-Margin Trap. Do not send direct cash discounts.
- Action: Shift them to non-monetary value-add campaigns. Target them with product bundles where the perceived value is high but our margin remains protected (e.g., "Buy 2, Get a Travel-Sized Item Free").

Case 4: CUST00045 (The Silent Detractor)

- Profile: Bronze Tier, signed up 90 days ago.

- The Conflict: They made one high-value purchase (₹1,200) and have not ordered since. They have zero support tickets, but their 30-day web activities are completely flat (0 sessions, last visit 65 days ago).
- Strategic Verdict: At-Risk Churn. The product likely failed to meet expectations, but they decided to leave silently without complaining.
- Action: Send an automated post-onboarding sequence asking for an honest product review in exchange for a loyalty-points incentive, aiming to identify potential product formulation issues.

Case 5: CUST00102 (The Trapped Advocate)

- Profile: Platinum Tier, historical champion with ₹5,000+ lifetime spend.
- The Conflict: Their last 2 support tickets were reopened multiple times. Their average rating dropped from 4.8 to 2.0. However, they continue to browse our app daily (32 sessions in 30 days).
- Strategic Verdict: Immediate Service Recovery. A loyal customer who is frustrated but still wants to buy.
- Action: Assign a senior customer experience executive to call them directly, resolve their open issues immediately, and offer a dedicated concierge contact for future orders.

Case 6: CUST00115 (The Channel Hopper)

- Profile: Acquired via an Influencer campaign.
- The Conflict: High initial spend (₹2,100) on Makeup. They had a late delivery issue, resulting in an angry email. Since then, they have completely opted out of email marketing consent, making direct outreach difficult.
- Strategic Verdict: Push Notifications & Retargeting.
- Action: Utilize programmatic SMS or browser push notifications (if opted-in) with a feedback link. Focus on resolving their service complaint rather than promoting products.

Case 7: CUST00189 (The Category Explorer)

- Profile: High frequency, low average order value (AOV) under ₹300.
- The Conflict: They buy across 4 different product categories (high category diversity) but only low-priced trial or travel items.
- Strategic Verdict: Upsell Target. High affinity for our catalog but hesitant to buy full-size products.
- Action: Deliver a personalized cross-sell routine builder highlighting full-size products corresponding to their purchased trial sizes, accompanied by a "Risk-Free Trial" guarantee.

Case 8: CUST00220 (The Unresolved Champion)

- Profile: Champion with ₹4,500 spend, active in the last 15 days.
- The Conflict: They currently have an open support ticket labeled damaged_item with a negative sentiment score, but they have not stopped ordering.
- Strategic Verdict: Proactive Resolution. This customer is loyal enough to overlook a damaged item, but ignoring it will eventually break their trust.

- Action: Do not wait for the support team's SLA. Automatically dispatch a replacement product with expedited shipping and flag this ID in the CRM to block promotional emails until the ticket is resolved.

Case 9: CUST00305 (The False Dormant)

- Profile: No orders in 180 days.
- The Conflict: Out of nowhere, they had 20 web sessions, 80 product views, and added 3 items to their cart in the last 48 hours without checking out.
- Strategic Verdict: High-Intent Cart Abandonment.
- Action: Trigger an automated, highly personalized "Did you forget something?" email within 4 hours. Pair it with a limited-time free-shipping incentive to convert this immediate purchase intent.

Case 10: CUST00411 (The High-Cost Support Abuser)

- Profile: Frequency of 2 orders (total spend ₹800).
- The Conflict: They have opened 9 support tickets in 90 days, mostly demanding refunds or complaining about minor delivery updates. Their net margin is negative due to high customer service overhead.
- Strategic Verdict: De-prioritize Retention. High-maintenance, low-margin customer.
- Action: Route their support queries to self-service chat channels. Do not allocate any portion of our retention campaign budget to this user.
